Vanguard Market & Economic Overview

U.S. Equity markets continued to produce strong results

Propelled by 7.1% in gains in the third quarter, U.S. equities[1] continued to outperform international markets[2] by a wide margin as international stocks achieved only a modest 0.5% return for the 3 month period. For the quarter, large cap stocks turned in the best performance, with a 7.5% gain, while the mid-cap and small-cap[5] equity segments each returned nearly 5%. Growth[6] stocks outpaced their value[7] counterparts for the quarter, returning 8.9% versus 5.4%, respectively. Over the past nine months, growth stocks continued their dominance as their 17% returns more than quadrupled the 4.2% results of value-oriented equities. The bull market in U.S. stocks persisted even as heated trade negotiations continued and the anticipation of higher inflation loomed. Continued strength in the U.S. equity market led to a 10.6% year-to-date return as large cap[3] (+10.5%), mid-cap[4] (+7.4%), and small-cap[5] (+11%) stocks all contributed to the advance. In the international markets, the effects of new trade agreements, uncertainty surrounding Brexit, and a stronger U.S. dollar contributed to just a 1.1% return for developed markets for the third quarter. The year-to-date results were also lackluster as developed markets fell -1.8%. Emerging markets[9], which were also affected by the stronger dollar and rising oil prices, returned -0.8% for the third quarter, and -7.6% on a year-to-date basis. Market participants continue to be concerned with high debt levels and potential volatility in certain emerging market regions.

Higher rates produced flat results for the broad bond market

The yield on the benchmark ten-year Treasury note rose from 2.85% at the end of June to 3.05% by the end of the third quarter. The Treasury yield curve continued to flatten as another Federal Reserve rate hike in September sent the shorter end of the curve upwards. Intermediate and long-term interest rates rose much more slowly based upon the expectations for future economic growth and inflation. The spread between the yields of the two-year and ten-year Treasury notes tightened to an extreme 18 bps (0.18%) on August 27th, and finished the quarter at 24 bps. The broad U.S. fixed income market[10] returned 0.03% during the third quarter, and -1.6% year-to-date as bond prices fell in response to the rising interest rate environment. Both U.S. Treasury bonds[11] and credit bonds[12] suffered losses on a year-to-date basis, returning -1.7% and -2.1%, respectively. However, credit bonds outpaced Treasury securities in the third quarter, returning 0.9% versus the broad Treasury benchmark mark of -0.6%. High yield bonds[13], much more sensitive to economic conditions, outpaced the other areas of the fixed income market, returning 2.4% for the quarter and 2.6% year-to-date. In the international fixed income arena, a stronger dollar hurt the returns of unhedged bonds[14] as they fell -3% through September. Their currency-hedged counterparts[15] fared better as evidenced by their 1.3% returns during the same period.

Economic data mostly positive across developed markets, despite geopolitical risks

U.S. economic conditions continued to improve as second quarter GDP (Gross Domestic Product) increased at an annual rate of 4.2%. The headline unemployment rate declined from an already low 4.0% to 3.7% during the quarter. Job gains averaged 185,000 per month over the third quarter and average hourly earnings rose 2.7% over the past year. Inflation continued to remain at relatively subdued levels, considering recent gains in both growth and payrolls. The PCE price index (personal consumption expenditures) increased 2.3% over 12 months (2.1% excluding food and energy). Consistent with its mandate, the Federal Reserve expects inflation levels to remain in the 2% range over the longer term.

Vanguard Market & Economic Overview

Economic growth in the Eurozone slowed to a 2.1% annual rate in the second quarter, down from a 2.5% level during the first quarter of the year. Meanwhile, there was a pick-up in the job market, as the unemployment rate steadily fell during 2018 from 8.6% to 8.1% as of August. This represents the lowest jobless rate since November of 2008. European Central Bank (ECB) President Mario Draghi expects consumer prices to begin rising in the Eurozone, and voiced expectations for 1.7% GDP growth during each of the next two years. He stated that short-term ECB interest rates would remain at current levels for at least another 12 months. While consumer confidence has declined since last year, it has remained at relatively healthy levels consistent with above-trend growth.

The United Kingdom saw GDP increase slightly to a 1.2% annual rate in the second quarter of the year from the 1.1% rate in the first quarter. The uncertainty surrounding Brexit negotiations continues to weigh on consumer and business sentiment. The ongoing talks and potential agreement might weigh on markets in 2019, when the UK is expected to leave the EU, in some fashion. There are approximately 200 days left for a deal to be finalized prior to the scheduled split in March and key negotiations are scheduled to be held during upcoming EU summit meetings in October and December.

Economic growth in China notched a 6.7% annual rate during the second quarter and was consistent with the expectations of market participants. The unemployment rate declined slightly during the quarter to a 3.8% level. Inflation rose each month to end at 2.3% at the August reading, just above the market's expectation of 2.2%. Higher prices of food, rent, utilities and education helped to drive higher prices but the overall level remains well below the Chinese government's target of 3% for this year.

Also in the Pacific region, the Japanese economy grew at 1%, a substantially lower level than recorded in late 2017. Higher food prices and cheaper technology continue to dampen growth. Inflation remains muted at 1.3% but above the market consensus of 1.1%. The unemployment rate was 2.4% at the end of August, but higher (+4.1%) for youth workers between the ages of 15-24. Labor shortages and Olympics-related demand are pushing the need for efficiency in raising investment capital and infrastructure spending.

The Federal Reserve raises rates again in September

The Committee raised the target range for the Fed Funds rate to 2.00% to 2.25%, reflecting their confidence in overall economic conditions. At the press conference following the recent Federal Open Market Committee meeting, Fed Chairman Jerome Powell explained that "rates remain low, and [the committee believes] that this gradual return to normal is helping to sustain this strong economy for the longer-run benefit of all Americans."

Substantiating this view, the financial markets expect the Fed Funds rate will increase 2 more times over the next 12 months. Vanguard believes that the Fed will increase the Fed funds rate 3 times over the next twelve months, vs 2 times priced into the market, before reaching its terminal rate (2.75-3%) this cycle.

Mario Draghi, President of the European Central Bank (ECB), stated [the bank] expects the ECB key interest rates would remain at present levels at least through the summer of 2019. The ECB stated that their bond purchases (i.e. quantitative easing) would be wound down by the end of this year. Risks to this schedule include a slowdown in growth for the U.S. and China due to trade frictions, and additional risk factors for certain emerging market nations. We expect 2 rate hikes from the Bank of England in 2019, potentially in May and November, following their last expected hike in August.

Vanguard Market & Economic Overview

This is slightly more aggressive than the market-implied path for rates based on overnight index swap forwards. These securities offer floating rates for fixed payments in anticipation of profitable changes in interest rates. The BOE joined the Fed as being the only other major central bank that has begun monetary policy normalization.

The People's Bank of China stated they would maintain a neutral monetary policy and focus on liquidity amidst a possible trade war with the U.S. This has led to the RMB depreciating against the dollar to continue supporting exports despite increasing tariffs.

In a speech in Osaka (Sept. 25, 2018), Bank of Japan (BOJ) Governor Kuroda reported Japan's economy is no longer in deflation, but that their annual price stability target of 2 percent inflation has not yet been achieved. He attributed this to the nation's experience of prolonged low growth and deflation, as well as forces exhibiting downward pressures such as technology. However, according to a recent BOJ survey, enterprises claiming output prices have risen exceeded those who said prices have fallen. Even with prospects of normalizing inflation, the Governor made it clear that the BOJ will 'maintain the current extremely low levels of short and long-term interest rates for an extended period of time'.

Final thoughts

Vanguard continues to urge investors to remain disciplined and globally diversified and to arm themselves with reasonable return expectations and low-cost strategies. Vanguard Chief Investment Officer, Greg Davis, summarized our forecast in a recent article, "Bond returns are likely to remain modest and U.S. equities also face some headwinds due to high valuation levels, which translate into subdued return expectations for the next decade. For all the contrast between the performance of the economy and market returns over the past ten years, we may be heading into a period of lower portfolio returns over the next ten years. A global balanced portfolio may return between 3% and 5% after accounting for inflation, compared with a historical return of around 7%."
